Moscow propaganda on SEATO meeting: The strong TASS statement attacking the SEATO meeting in Manila furthers Soviet propaganda efforts to discredit US motives in Asia. By contrasting Soviet proposals for nuclear-free zones and a "collective peace pact in Asia" with alleged US-SEATO attempts to set up nuclear and rocket bases in Europe and Asia, Moscow seeks to generate Asian support for a summit meeting. The USSR made similar attacks on the recent NATO and Baghdad Pact meetings. [redacted]

Soviet-Yugoslav relations: A stinging attack on Soviet Marshal Konev, accusing him--apparently with little justification--of ignoring the Yugoslav contribution to victory in World War II, breaks the uneasy truce which has existed between Belgrade and Moscow since last fall's Communist conference. The deliberate gesture may have been designed to enhance Tito's waning prestige by defending his wartime role and to induce Moscow to give him a more positive endorsement than it has recently made. Indonesia: The Indonesian Government apparently has begun a military campaign in the hope of achieving a quick knockout of the dissident movement in Central Sumatra. Army forces, said to number 300 men, have landed at Bengkalis in east Central Sumatra. The Indonesian G-3 says a total of 4 battalions is available in the Riau Islands area to stage an attack on Pakanbaru, 120 miles up the Siak River from Bengkalis. This may coincide with an air and sea attack which previous reports indicated was planned against the west coast. At the urgent request of the Indonesian Government, Stanvac and Caltex employees and dependents in Central Sumatra have been ordered to evacuate to Singapore or to designated safe havens. Meanwhile, the Hatta-Sukarno talks have been indefinitely suspended and Sukarno has started on a one-week tour of Java and East Indonesia during which he can be expected to attempt to mobilize public support for the antidissident campaign.

issues in the western Sahara. The French Embassy in Rabat is concerned, particularly in view of the French military presence in Morocco, that the Spanish may take a rash step that would bring them into conflict with the Royal Moroccan Army. Morocco's continued agitation of the Ifni question may foreshadow an early political move designed to bring international pressure on Madrid--possibly in the UN--to negotiate on terms acceptable to Morocco.

Cuba: President Batista has agreed to mediation by the church-sponsored "Committee of National Harmony" between his government and the opposition. Army leaders, on whom Batista is ultimately dependent, may be taking an independent interest in the mediation efforts. Rebel leaders, however, are skeptical of mediation talks. Sabotage and terrorism continue, and a student strike in several areas is gaining momentum.

Soviet Initiatives in Southeast Asia

Moscow's vague call for a collective peace pact in its attack on SEATO is probably an effort to propagate this idea among Asians rather than a firm move toward specific proposals. TASS describes the denuclearized zone in Asia as "gaining increasing support," and warns that the plans of the Western powers in SEATO are fraught with the danger of Asian "involvement" in a devastating war in Asia. Moscow is concurrently stepping up a drive to expand relations with pro-Western Thailand and Malaya, while the Chinese Communists are calling for a Korean settlement.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Firyubin is pushing similar Soviet aims at the current ECAFE conference in Malaya. He compared the "greater progress" of neutralist countries in Asia with that of the participants in military blocs. He invited most ECAFE countries to visit the Soviet Central Asian republics and witness their economic achievements. He specifically proposed creation of a staff of geological experts, supplied and financed by the "advanced" nations, to provide an advisory prospecting service in the area, and called for a declaration of the principles of economic cooperation on the basis of the Bandung conference. Soviet-Yugoslav Relations

Yugoslavia's leading newspaper Borba accused Soviet Marshal Konev on 6 March of ignoring the Yugoslav contribution to victory in World War II. It declared that this "offensive attitude" is "directly at odds with the proclaimed policy of friendly Soviet cooperation with socialist Yugoslavia" and asked why Konev should revive a Stalinist practice which Khrushchev had "forcefully condemned."

The slight occurred on 23 February in the Czech party organ Rude Pravo commemorating the Red Army's 40th anniversary, which reprinted the Konev article but omitted his reference to Yugoslavia. Since other satellite papers mentioned Yugoslavia in their reprints of Konev's article, the Rude Pravo omission probably derived from Czechoslovak antipathy toward the Yugoslavs and was not necessarily done with high-level Soviet knowledge.

Borba thus went out of its way to break the uneasy truce which has existed between Belgrade and Moscow since last fall, perhaps in an effort to provoke Moscow to clarify its attitude toward Tito. The newspaper observed that the Yugoslavs have refrained from reacting to similar slights until the Konev article which is the "most drastic of all in the belittlement and ignoring of Yugoslavia's contribution." Moscow has in fact virtually ignored Yugoslav developments since Tito refused to subscribe to the November Moscow declaration.

Having failed in recent efforts to increase his waning prestige, Tito, on the eve of national elections and a party congress, may be defending his role in World War II in the hope that the patriotic fervor this would engender on his behalf would outweigh the damage it would do to Belgrade-Moscow relations.

Indonesian Government Moving Toward Military Showdown With Dissidents

The Indonesian Army on 8 March landed some 300 troops on dissident-held Bengkalis Island off the east coast of Central Sumatra. This action is the first use of ground forces against the dissidents and, according to the Indonesian G-3, is the forerunner of a four-battalion attack in the next few days on the oil center of Pakanbaru some 120 miles up the Siak River. The G-3 also stated that this movement would coincide with a heavy air and sea attack against Padang, the dissident stronghold on the west coast. At the request of the government, Stanvac and Caltex employees and their dependents have been ordered to evacuate to Singapore or to designated safe havens.

There are indeed indications that Central Sumatra will be invaded from both east and west in the near future.

On 6 March,

25X1DIA

revealed the presence of a large transport and a large fleet of small craft at Tandjung Pinang in the Riau Islands, long reported as the main staging area for operations against the Sumatran east coast. A 6,000-ton vessel carrying small landing craft, army trucks, and troops was sighted heading for Tandjung Pinang on 8 March.

25X1C The next day, shipping was beginning to concentrate around Bengkalis and discovered "50 or more" small vessels concentrated some 200 miles to the north.

Several ships, including two LST's carrying tanks and the destroyer Gadja Mada loaded with troops, are reported to have left Djakarta between 3 and 6 March. Since these vessels have not been spotted on the east coast of Sumatra have been ordered to evacuate the area, "but not by sea." The air force has also dropped leaflets in the area, warning that an invasion would take place in a "very short time." The possibility of an airdrop on either the Padang or Pakanbaru areas is suggested by the departure on 7 March of ten C-47 type aircraft from Djakarta after having all doors removed.

25X1C they may have sailed through the Sunda Straits and up the west coast. Americans in Padang

Djakarta is hoping it will achieve a quick knockout. Army headquarters apparently is convinced that many dissident troops are not well trained and that there will be large-scale defections once hostilities commence. Premier Djuanda has told the American ambassador that he believed the entire matter will be resolved in a "week or two."

The dissidents, who expect an attack, remain defiant and have been strengthening their defenses. They concede that the government forces probably can effect a landing, but state their strong defenses at Padang and guerrilla operations will take a "heavy toll."

The Hatta-Sukarno talks have been indefinitely suspended and Sukarno has left on a tour of Java and East Indonesia. His primary objective is probably to build public support for the military campaign against the dissidents. His trip will be climaxed on 16 March when he is scheduled to address a mass meeting in Bandung.

III. THE WEST

Saharan Territorial Dispute Worsening Spanish-Moroccan Relations

It is becoming increasingly unlikely that the Spanish and Moroccan governments will be able to negotiate an early settlement of their territorial dispute in the western Sahara. According to Ambassador Lodge in Madrid, Morocco's declared territorial aspirations have made negotiations almost impossible. He reports that tempers in Madrid are wearing thin and that in both the Ifni area and the former northern zone of Morocco, incidents could at any time release pent-up feelings to create an explosive situation.

The French Embassy in Rabat fears that Madrid's "unreasonable and emotional attitude" toward difficulties over Morocco's southern border might cause the Spanish to lose their heads and take steps that would bring on clashes with the Royal Moroccan Army. The embassy feels that in such an event, France would be bound by its commitment to aid Morocco if attacked.

The Moroccan Foreign Ministry warned Ambassador Cannon in Rabat on 4 March that a continuance of Spanish military action in Ifni and a spread of such action into Morocco would lead to a war with Spain. The ambassador believes Rabat may be preparing a political move--possibly in the United Nations--in an effort to bring outside pressure on Spain to negotiate on terms acceptable to Morocco.

Cuban President Accepts Church's Mediation Proposal

Cuban President Batista has accepted a proposal of members of the Roman Catholic hierarchy that they establish a committee to mediate between the government and the opposition. A four-man "Committee of National Harmony," composed of a representative of the church, two former vice presidents, and a leading banker, will strive to end revolutionary activity, obtain an amnesty law, and postpone the general elections, now set for 1 June, to allow for a "cooling off" period. Fidel Castro's rebel group will be asked to support the committee but will not be offered representation.

A group of Cuban army generals has decided to support the church's mediation efforts, according to a fairly reliable source of the American Embassy. If such a military group should gain the support of junior officers, it could exert decisive pressure on Batista during the mediation talks. Batista has long drawn his strength from control over the military.

The youthful revolutionary leaders, however, have told newspaper reporters that they regard mediation efforts with skepticism. A student strike is gaining momentum, and rebel sabotage and terrorism are continuing. [redacted]
